

COUNTY MAY GET WHEAT FOR NEEDY

Officials And Representatives Of Organizations
Called To Meeting

MISS BUTCH ACTIVE

Discussion To Be Wednesday at 7:30

Representatives of Circleville's and Pickaway-co's charitable organizations are asked to meet in the Chamber of Commerce rooms Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. to discuss the need of distribution of flour and wheat in the city and county. The request was issued Monday by Miss Agnes Butch, secretary of the Red Cross.

DISTRIBUTE WHEAT

It has been learned that grain being distributed by the federal board is available and it is necessary that individual committees express their wishes and needs before distribution will be made. It is also necessary to designate a place for milling the grain which would be sent from the nearest federal farm board elevator.

Trustees of the various townships, representatives of the American Legion and auxiliary, County Superintendent of Schools D. L. Buchanan, representatives of the B. P. O. Elks lodge and of the Circleville Benevolent Association, besides other city and county officials are requested to attend the session.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The administration's latest plan for disposing of the farm board's surplus wheat and cotton, by appropriating $100,000,000 to finance long-time credit deals in the Orient, appeared doomed today as a bi-partisan farm block organized to defeat it.

The farm block may favor extended credit sales of wheat and cotton, but not at the expense of using appropriations set aside for the relief of agriculture. The administration plan would utilize $100,000,000 from the $200,000,000 given the reconstruction finance corporation to aid farmers. This use of relief funds brought attacks on the plan.

"I have not studied the proposal," said Senator Norris, Republican of Nebraska, "but at first blush it looks like a depletion of the funds set aside for the relief of the farmers in distress. It seems to me the farm board has the power now to negotiate such long-time credit deals, without specific appropriations. It did so in one deal with China and in another with Brazil."

KIDNAPER GETS TERM IN "PEN"

De Marco Pleads Guilty To Harboring and Concealing DeJute Boy.

WARREN, O., March 21.—Bringing a sudden halt to his hearing, John De Marco, 31, of Youngstown today entered a plea of guilty to a charge of "harboring and concealing" James DeJute, 11-year-old Niles boy who was kidnapped and held captive for three days.

Accepting the plea, Judge Lynn E. Griffith immediately sentenced De Marco to one to 20 years in the Ohio Penitentiary.

De Marco was the alleged accomplice of Dowell Hargrave, 30, also of Youngstown, who last week was given a life sentence after his conviction on charges of kidnapping the youth. The penalty was the maximum under Ohio law.

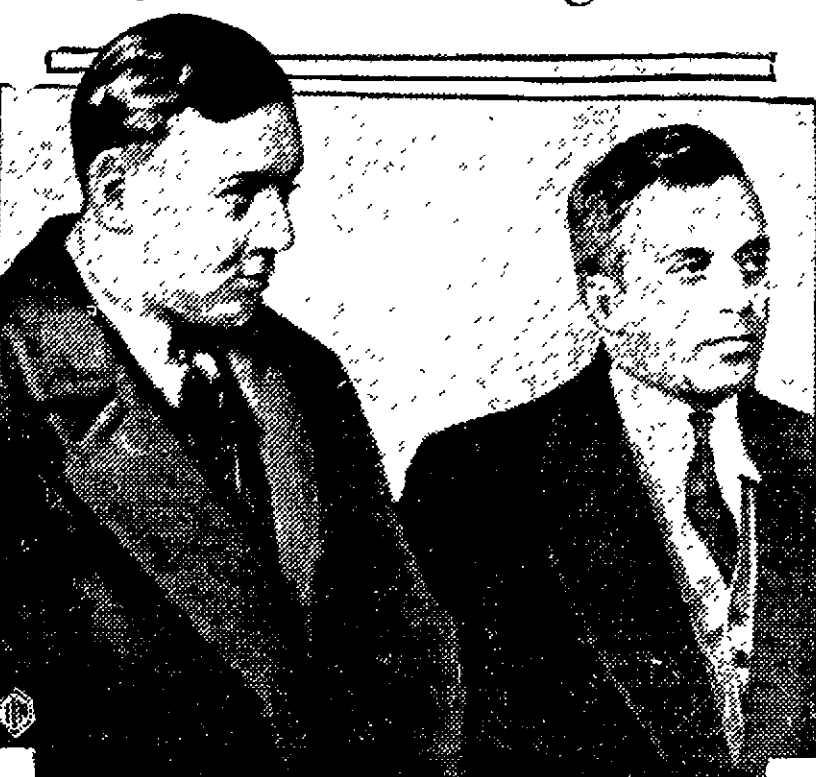

FISHERMEN SAVED FROM FLOE OF ICE

FREMONT, O., March 21.—Seven fishermen were rescued from an ice floe which broke loose from shore on Lake Erie between Danbury and Port Clinton today according to Homer King, 41, of Fremont, who said he was a member of the fishing party.

SMART, SMART DOG!

Speaking of an eye for business, this dog knows his stuff. Jiggs, fox terrier belonging to Charles Carle, saw a $1 bill on the floor of the Mecca restaurant recently. The dog promptly took the bill in his mouth, walked behind the counter and dropped it at the feet of Lew Fohl, employee of the restaurant. He then looked up at Mr. Fohl as though to say "Pick it up."

Sought in Lindbergh Case

Implicated in the 1930 kidnaping of Max Price, New Haven, Conn., realtor, who was held for $25,000 ransom and then released on promise of payment of a further $30,000, Sam Handel (left) and Harry Fleischer, said to be members of a notorious Detroit gang of kidnapers, are being sought by New Jersey authorities for questioning in connection with the Lindbergh case. Meanwhile, Henry "Red" Johnson was once more questioned by Colonel Lindbergh himself in an endeavor to get even the slightest clue that would help in tracing the stolen baby.

HAIRSTON ON STAND TODAY

Negro's Case To Be Submitted
To Judge Joseph W. Adkins At Conclusion.

John "Dumpy" Hairston, 27, negro, took the stand this afternoon in his own defense when court resumed after a continuance of two weeks. The state rested its case against Hairston before adjournment.

Hairston was to tell the story he has related several times as a witness for the state against Walker Brown, Henry Loudermilk, Lacey Adams and Frank Smith in their trials.

At the close of Hairston's testimony and his cross-examination the case will be submitted to Judge Joseph W. Adkins to decide as Hairston waived a trial by jury. He is being defended by former Judge Charles Dresbach.

Prosecuting Attorney Emmitt L. Crist and Meeker Terwilliger are representing the state.

NEW CLUES IN KIDNAP CASE

Carrier Pigeons Involved In
Latest Investigation of Lindbergh Case.

TRENTON, N. J., March 21.—Two new clues involving carrier pigeons, engaged the attention today of the New Jersey state police striving to solve the mysterious kidnaping of the infant son of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey police, in his official announcement to the press this morning touched on both clues but there was nothing in his statement to indicate he placed any undue significance in either of them.

The investigation, in truth, apparently has resolved itself into groping at almost any new "clues" and into covering old trails with dwindling optimism. Today, 20 days after the crime was committed—Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh remained at their home near Hopewell, hoping for some definite news of an optimistic character, but none came.

REPORTS ATTEMPT TO STOP HIS CAR

William Heggie, E. Man-st. reported to the sheriff's office late Saturday that three men in a blue Buick car tried to force him to stop his automobile on the Columbus-pk.

The men drove besides his car. Mr. Heggie said, and flashed a light in his face ordering him to stop. He told Sheriff Haddock he slowed down but when he saw several cars approaching he drove on and was not molested again.

The driver of the Buick had fled before the sheriff reached the scene.

MERCURY TO RISE, REPORT

Each Day to Become Warmer,
Alexander Says; Cold
Wave Hits Chicago.

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—Although there was a chilly wind in many sections of the state when spring arrived officially yesterday, "real warm spring weather" can be expected next week, Weather Observer William Alexander said today.

A change from cool weather to warm weather is due Saturday or Sunday, with each day becoming increasingly warm, Alexander said.

Between today and the end of the week there will be a short period of "moderately cool" weather, the weatherman said.

CHICAGO, March 21.—Spring and a blinding, swirling snow storm which took on the aspect of a blizzard, arrived here simultaneously.

Snow, which began falling last night, was driven by a strong wind which swept across Lake Michigan early today, and drifts reached a depth of two or three feet in many districts.

The temperature dropped through the night and early today was unofficially reported as 26 degrees.

Circleville's highest temperature Sunday was 45 degrees according to Dr. H. R. Clarke, weather observer, and the lowest the mercury reached Sunday night and Monday morning was the 30 mark.

Rain And Snow Believed

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—A night mail plane and a scouting plane were hurriedly pressed into emergency service today to join in the search for an eastbound Northrup line ship believed to have been forced down near Pittsburgh.

Farley and Bartel were ordered to fly low and search in the territory along the Ohio river near Pittsburgh.

STEUBENVILLE, O., March 21.—Although local residents reported hearing the hum of an airplane motor over this city at about 2:35 a. m. no trace could be found here this afternoon of a missing Northrup plane believed to have been forced down in eastern Ohio.

Frankie Butte, manager of the Beverly Hill airport here, conducted a search of this section after he was notified that the plane was lost and that it might have been grounded near here.

He returned declaring that he had been unable to find a trace of the missing plane anywhere.

Steubenville residents reported hearing the plane overhead at almost the time Pilot Hal George was making a radio telephone call to Pittsburgh to inquire about the weather in the vicinity of Pittsburgh where he was flying with Mrs. Carl F. Cole of St. Louis, a passenger.

PITTSBURGH, March 21.—Scouting planes took off from Bettis field here shortly after 11 a. m. today in search for an east-bound Northrup line airplane believed forced down between here and East Cambridge, O.

AMERICAN INDIAN AUTHOR SUICIDES

LOS ANGELES, March 21.—Why Chief Buffalo Child Long Lance 36, noted American Indian author, killed himself today was a mystery that puzzled friends and investigators, according to deputy sheriff.

Seated on a lounge in the palatial home of Anita Baldwin, millionaire daughter of the late "Lucky" Baldwin, Chief Long Lance ended his spectacular career by firing a bullet through his head. Deputy Sheriff Frank Gompert said.

Long Lance was a well-known figure in the literary world. He was a member of the "Lucky" Baldwin family.

NO SURRENDER WARN DRYS TO NATION'S WETS

Candidates Seeking Referendum Will Pay At
Polls, Dry Force Says

HOOVER WATCHED

President's Cabinet Members On Wet Side

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Dry organizations which nailed the 18th Amendment into the Constitution hoisted the flag of "No Surrender" today and warned both Republican and Democratic parties that any deviation from the prohibition cause, either in platform or in the candidates, will be punished at the polls in November.

As for the 187 members of the House who voted in favor of resubmission last week, they have been put on the Anti-Saloon League's "blacklist" and will be opposed for renomination and re-election. The League takes the position that a vote to re-submit the 18th Amendment is a "wet vote" and should be treated accordingly.

ASK INFORMED
The least that the organized drys will be willing to accept from both parties this year in their platform is a plank calling for strict enforcement. They will not insist that the platforms specifically endorse the 18th Amendment by name, but that is as far as the League and its affiliated organizations are willing to go by way of compromise.

Dr. F. Scott McBride, General Superintendent of the League made known the drys' position in the face of increasing evidence that both the Republican and Democratic platforms are going to present some hope for opponents of prohibition.

So far as Democrats are concerned it is now generally conceded that their platform will contain a wet or moist plank, modeled probably along the "home rule" idea advanced by John J. Rascob, and concurred in by leaders of eastern and middle western states that will have a majority of the delegates at Chicago.

AWAIT HOOVER
As for the Republicans, agitation for at least a referendum plank is growing enormously, under the leadership of Eastern leaders, and supported in some instances by members of President Hoover's cabinet. The Republican wet, in fact, are fairly confident they will be able to write a referendum plank into the platform at Chicago. The only thing that can stop it, they say, is for President Hoover to flatly reject it, which thus far he has not done. Nor do they believe he will. Were he so minded, they say, he would long since have called off those members of his cabinet who are actively drumming up support for such a plank.

WIDOW KILLED

Riddled by six bullets the body of Mrs. Mary Hare, 43-year-old widow of Wadsworth, O., was found in a ravine near Ravenna, O. Ivan Haeckenberg, 24, admittedly the sweetheart of Mrs. Hare, was questioned at length in a Ravenna hospital where he was recovering from several bullet wounds. He told police his wounds were self-inflicted and later confessed to the killing of Mrs. Hare, officials say.

ROBBERY CLUE AGAIN FAILURE

Five Men Arrested at Adelphi
Cause Excitement; Are
Held in Ross-Co.

Another possible clue to the men who robbed the Cliftona theatre and the Necker garage two weeks ago went awry late Saturday when neither of five men arrested at Adelphi were identified as men who perpetrated the crimes.

They were being held in Chillicothe after a thrilling affair in Adelphi which is described by a Chillicothe newspaperman.

"Deputy Sheriff Ben Rount assumed by Dr. W. O. Oliver whom he pressed into service captured a quintet of suspect bank bandits at Adelphi. They found a loaded revolver on one of the men containing a tear gas cartridge and four other loads and a tear gas pen on another.

COUNTY MAY GET WHEAT FOR NEEDY

Officials And Representa-

Called To Meeting

MISS BUTCH ACTIVE

Discussion To Be Wednes-
day at 7:30

Representatives of Circleville's and Pickaway-co's charitable organizations are asked to meet in the Chamber of Commerce rooms Wednesday at 7:30 p. m. to discuss the need of distribution of flour and wheat in the city and county. The request was issued Monday by Miss Agnes Butch, secretary of the Red Cross.

DISTRIBUTE WHEAT

It has been learned that grain being distributed by the federal board is available and it is necessary that individual committees express their wishes and needs before distribution will be made. It is also necessary to designate a place for milling the grain which would be sent from the nearest federal farm board elevator.

Trustees of the various townships, representatives of the American Legion and auxiliary, County Superintendent of Schools D. L. Buchanan, representatives of the B. P. O. Elks lodge and of the Circleville Benevolent Association, besides other city and county officials are requested to attend the session.

WASHINGTON, March 21—The administration's latest plan for disposing of the Farm Board's surplus wheat and cotton, by appropriating $100,000,000 to finance long-time credit deals in the Orient, appeared doomed today as a bi-partisan farm block organized to defeat it.

The farm block may favor extended credit sales of wheat and cotton, but not at the expense of using appropriations set aside for the relief of agriculture. The administration plan would utilize $100,000,000 from the $200,000,000 given the reconstruction finance corporation to aid farmers. This use of relief funds brought attacks on the plan.

"I have not studied the proposal," said Senator Norris, Republican of Nebraska, "but at first blush it looks like a depletion of the funds set aside for the relief of the farmers in distress. It seems to me the farm board has the power now to negotiate such long-time credit deals, without specific appropriations. It did so in one deal with China and in another with Brazil."

Harboring And Conceal-
ing DeJute Boy.

WARREN, O., March 21—Bringing a sudden halt to his hearing, John De Marco, 31, of Youngstown today entered a plea of guilty to a charge of "harboring and concealing" James De Jute, 11-year-old Niles boy who was kidnapped and held captive for three days.

Accepting the plea, Judge Lynn E. Griffith immediately sentenced De Marco to one to 20 years in the Ohio Penitentiary.

De Marco was the alleged accomplice of Dowell Hargraves, 30, also of Youngstown, who last week was given a life sentence when his conviction on charges of kidnapping the youth. The penalty was the maximum under Ohio law.

FISHERMEN SAVED FROM FLOE OF ICE

FREMONT, O., March 21—Seven fishermen were rescued from an ice floe which broke loose from shore on Lake Erie between Danbury and Port Clinton today according to Homer King, 41, of Fremont, who said he was a member of the fishing party.

SMART, SMART DOG!

Speaking of an eye for business, this dog knows his stuff. Jiggs, fog tierrier belonging to Charles Carle, saw a $1 bill on the floor of the Mecca restaurant recently. The dog promptly took the bill in his mouth, walked behind the counter and dropped it at the feet of Lew Fohl, employe of the restaurant. He then looked up at Mr. Fohl as though to say "Pick it up."

Sought in Lindbergh Case

Implicated in the 1930 kidnaping of Max Price, New Haven, Conn., realtor, who was held for $25,000 ransom and then released on promise of payment of a further $30,000, Sam Handel (left) and Harry Fleischer, said to be members of a notorious Detroit gang of kidnapers, are being sought by New Jersey authorities for questioning in connection with the Lindbergh case. Meanwhile, Henry "Red" Johnson was once more questioned by Colonel Lindbergh himself in an endeavor to get even the slightest clue that would help in tracing the stolen baby.

HAIRSTON ON STAND TODAY

Negro's Case To Be Submitted
To Judge Joseph W. Adkins At Conclusion.

John 'Dumpe' Hairston, 27, negro, took the stand this afternoon in his own defense when court resumed after a continuance of two weeks. The state rested its case against Hairston before adjournment.

Hairston was to tell the story he has related several times as a witness for the state against Walker Brown, Henry Loudermilk, Lacey Adams and Frank Smith in their trials.

At the close of Hairston's testimony and his cross-examination the case will be submitted to Judge Joseph W. Adkins to decide as Hairston waived a trial by jury. He is being defended by Former Judge Charles Dresbach.

Prosecuting Attorney Emmitt L. Crist and Meeker Terwilliger are representing the state.

NEW CLUES IN KIDNAP CASE

Carrier Pigeons Involved In
Latest Investigation of Lindburgh Case.

TRENTON, N. J., March 21—Two new clues involving carrier pigeons, engaged the attention today of the New Jersey state police striving to solve the mysterious kidnaping of the infant son of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey police, in his official announcement to the press this morning touched on both clues but there was nothing in his statement to indicate he placed any undue significance in either of them.

The investigation, in truth, apparently has resolved itself into groping at almost any new "clues" and into covering old trails with dwindling optimism. Today, 20 days after the crime was committed—Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh remained at their home near Hope-well, hoping for some definite news of an optimistic character, but none came.

The driver of the Buick had fled before the sheriff reached the scene.

Alexander Says; Cold
Wave Hits Chicago.

COLUMBUS, O., March 21—Although there was a chilly wind in many sections of the state when spring arrived officially yesterday, "real warm spring weather" can be expected next week, Weather Observer William Alexander said today.

A change from cool weather to warm weather is due Saturday or Sunday, with each day becoming increasingly warm, Alexander said.

Between today and the end of the week there will be a short period of "moderately cool" weather, the weatherman said.

CHICAGO, March 21—Spring and a blinding, swirling snow storm which took on the aspect of a blizzard, arrived here simultaneously.

Snow, which began falling last night, was driven by a strong wind which swept across Lake Michigan early today, and drifts reached a depth of two or three feet, in many districts.

The temperature dropped through the night and early today was unofficially reported as 26 degrees.

Circleville's highest temperature Sunday was 45 degrees according to Dr. H. R. Clarke, weather observer, and the lowest the mercury reached Sunday night and Monday morning was the 30 mark.

ARE LONG OVERDUE

Rain And Snow Believed
Cause For Delay

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—A night mail plane and a scouting plane were hurriedly pressed into emergency service today to join in the search for an eastbound Northrup line ship believed to have been forced down near Pittsburgh.

Two pilots for Transcontinental and Western Air Incorporated, Walter Farley and Joe Bartel of Columbus, were dispatched from Port Columbus after Pilot Hal George and a passenger, Mrs. Carl F. Cole, wife of a St. Louis physician, were reported long overdue at Pittsburgh.

SEARCH IN RIVER
Farley and Bartel were ordered to fly low and search in the territory along the Ohio river near Pittsburgh.

STEUBENVILLE, O., March 21.—Although local residents reported hearing the hum of an airplane motor over this city at about 2:35 a. m. no trace could be found this afternoon of a missing Northrup plane believed to have been forced down in eastern Ohio.

Frank Butte, manager of the Beverly Hill airport here, conducted a search of this section after he was notified that the plane was lost and that it might have been grounded near here.

FIND NO TRACE
He returned declaring that he had been unable to find a trace of the missing plane anywhere.

Steubenville residents reported hearing the plane overhead at almost the time Pilot Hal George was making a radio telephone call to Pittsburgh to inquire about the weather in the vicinity of Pittsburgh where he was flying with Mrs. Carl F. Cole of St. Louis, a passenger.

PITTSBURGH, March 21.—Scouting planes took off from Bettis field here shortly after 11 a. m. today in search for an east-bound Northrup lines airplane believed forced down between here and East Cambridge, O.

Kidnaping Story Is Told Police By Victim Today

BERLIN, Md., March 21.—Rescued from Holly Grove Swamp where his abductors manacles him with chains to a tree and left him over night, Charles W. Brown, 31, aided police today in the hunt for his brutal kidnappers.

Brutal exhaustion from hunger and exposure, Brown was saved by Edward Taylor, farm hand, who with a sledge hammer and chisel knocked off the fetters that bound Brown by the arms, legs and neck to the tree.

WAXLAD BY QUARTET
Brown told police he was wax-laid and kidnapped by four masked men last Tuesday at Evergreen woods.

Before he was bound and blindfolded by his abductors, he said, he fought with them and succeeded in ripping off the mask of one

AMERICAN INDIAN AUTHOR SUICIDES

LOS ANGELES, March 21.—Why Chief Buffalo Child Long Lance 36, noted American Indian author, killed himself today was a mystery that puzzled friends and investigators, according to deputy sheriffs.

Seated on a lounge in the palatial home of Anita Baldwin, multimillionaire daughter of the late "Lucky" Baldwin, Chief Long Lance ended his spectacular career by firing a bullet through his head, Deputy Sheriff Frank Gompert said.

He was given a ride by R. R. Morris in his city and while driving past the Hartman farm crash- ing into the automobile of A. McLaughlin, 220, Dunlin-rd. Columbus.

Young Good suffered numerous cuts about the face.

The Morris in the accident was not Ralph Morris, N. Court-st.

NO SURRENDER WARN DRY TO NATION'S WETS

Candidates Seeking Referendum Will Pay At
Polls, Dry Force Says

HOOVER WATCHED

President's Cabinet Members On Wet Side

WASHINGTON, March 21—Dry organizations which nailed the 18th Amendment into the Constitution hoisted the flag of "No Surrender" today and warned both Republican and Democratic parties that any deviation from the prohibition cause, either in platform or in the candidates, will be punished at the polls in November.

As for the 187 members of the House who voted in favor of resubmission last week, they have been put on the Anti-Saloon League's "blacklist" and will be opposed for renomination and re-election. The League takes the position that a vote to re-submit the 18th Amendment is a "wet vote" and should be treated accordingly.

ASK ENFORCEMENT

The least that the organized dries will be willing to accept from both parties this year in their platform is a plank calling for strict enforcement. They will not insist that the platforms specifically endorse the 18th Amendment by name, but that is as far as the League and its affiliated organizations are willing to go by way of compromise.

Dr. F. Scott McBride, General Superintendent of the League made known the dries' position in the face of increasing evidence that both the Republican and Democratic platforms are going to present some hope for opponents of prohibition.

So far as Democrats are concerned it is now generally conceded that their platform will contain a wet or moist plank, modeled probably along the "home rule" idea advanced by John J. Rascob, and concurred in by leaders of eastern and middle western states that will have a majority of the delegates at Chicago.

AWAIT HOOVER

As for the Republicans, agitation for at least a referendum plank is growing enormously, under the leadership of Eastern leaders, and supported in some instances by members of President Hoover's cabinet. The Republican wets, in fact, are fairly confident they will be able to write a referendum plank into the platform at Chicago. The only thing that can stop it, they say, is for President Hoover to flatly reject it, which thus far he has not done. Nor do they believe it will. Were he so minded, they say, he would long since have called off those members of his cabinet who are actively drumming up support for such a plank.

ROBBERY CLUE AGAIN FAILURE

Five Men Arrested at Adelphi
Cause Excitement; Are
Held in Ross-Co.

Another possible clue to the men who robbed the Cliftona theatre and the Noecker garage two weeks ago went awry late Saturday when neither of five men arrested at Adelphi were identified as men who perpetrated the crimes.

They were being held in Chillicothe after a thrilling affair in Adelphi which is described by a Chillicothe newspaper man.

"Deputy Sheriff Ben Routt assisted by Dr. W. O. Oliver whom he pressed into service captured a quintet of suspect bank bandits at Adelphi. They found a loaded revolver on one of the men containing a tear gas cartridge and four other loads and a tear gas pen on another.

"They gave their names as John and Cleve Craft, brothers, Ben Simmons, John Kline and John Norman and said their home was at Rockbridge, a village 12 miles from Lancaster on State Route No. 31.

"Their arrest was due to news of the robbery of a bank at Prospect and their driving into Adelphi, going to Hobbs restaurant and rooming house and going to bed with a request that they be awakened at five o'clock, a suspicious action when they were only a short distance from their homes.

DROVE TWO CARS

"They came into Adelphi in two automobiles a Jewett coach and a Model T Ford. The Ross-co Sheriff's office was notified of their advent into Adelphi and Deputy (Continued on Page Five)

GUARDSMEN ARE STONED BY STRIKERS

FEAR VIOLENCE

Mines Not Operating At Athens Today

ATHENS, O., March 21—Two National Guardsmen, enroute by automobile to relieve a shift of guardsmen on duty at the No. 6 mine of the Sunday Creek Coal Company of Millfield near here, were attacked and stoned this morning by a mob of alleged strikers. Lieut. Col. Luke P. Wolford reported.

Unable to get through the line of rioters, who pelted the guardsmen's automobile with stones and rocks, the relief shift was forced to return to headquarters at Nelsonville. The guardsmen's automobile was badly dented by the barrage of the rioters. It's body was dented and the machine's windshield and lights were smashed.

The guardsmen estimated that between 1500 and 2000 alleged strikers were gathered on the road between Nelsonville and Millfield.

The two Guardsmen, Capt. Norman Whiting of Marietta, and Capt. Harley Johnson of Columbus reported that the rioters had blockaded the road with logs and automobiles to prevent their passage to the Millfield mine. Neither Whiting nor Johnson was injured in the attack.

The outbreak this morning followed an uprising yesterday during which one mine official was seriously injured and a railroad trestle was dynamited. Last night, Lieut. Col. Wolford reported the situation in the mine was comparatively quiet.

Although two mines had been scheduled to resume work this morning, officials of the pits heeded a warning issued by Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson and made no effort to operate, at least for the time being. Henderson said that any attempt to operate now might result in further bloodshed and violence.

ATHENS, O., March 21—Several units of the Ohio National Guard were ready today to descend upon the bituminous coal fields of Athens-co and restore order, should violence break out again among the strikers.

The National Guard companies were ordered held in readiness for any emergency by Governor Geo. (Continued On Page Two)

Friends:—

This is the last week of the LEND-A-HAND 8-week campaign. To say that we have been deeply gratified by the result is to put it mildly. We are more than satisfied. Many, many new friends have been made for our store, and our old friends have told us that we are giving better values than ever before.

It is a happy circumstance that our LEND-A-HAND Campaign for the churches should end on Easter Week, one of the most important of the church holidays. We suggest that you turn in your Lend-A-Hand card on Sunday to the treasurer of your church organization to help swell the Easter offering of your church.

Various churches and church societies will receive when the returns are all in, a very handsome sum as the result of this campaign. How great this amount will be we cannot yet say. REMEMBER, WHETHER YOUR CARDS ARE ENTIRELY FILLED, OR NOT, YOU CAN

TURN THEM IN TO THE TREASURER OF YOUR CHURCH ORGANIZATION ON EASTER SUNDAY AND THEY WILL BE PAID FOR AS THEY STAND. The cards must all be in our hands before April first.

Thanking you all, and with best wishes,

Mrs. W. H. Funk

Court Tournery Scene Uncertain

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—Amid the hurrying for the new high school basketball champions of Ohio—Akron West and Castalia—it was learned today that the 1932 state finals may be held in Akron or Dayton.

The colorful spectacle that has been staged in Columbus for many years may be moved from this city, for at least a year, because the American Bowling Congress will occupy the Fairgrounds Coliseum during the Friday and Saturday when the state finals are customarily held at that place.

MAY MOVE SCENE
Due to this conflict, the board of control of the Ohio High School athletic association is considering the advisability of holding the championship play-off either in the Akron Goodyear gym or the Dayton Coliseum.

Commissioner H. R. Townsend said it "is possible" that the tourney may be held in Columbus despite the A. B. C. bowling classic. It might be held in the new Ohio State University gymnasium or in the Columbus auditorium.

ALL-STAR 5S ARE SELECTED

Akron West Places Andy Averitt, Art Labbe; North Places Curley Owen.

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—Related mythical honors came to 10 basketball players today as newspaper sports writers "covering" the annual state basketball tournament here confirmed their selections for the all Ohio high school cage teams. They were:

CLASS A
William Dye, Pomeroy, forward.
Arthur Labbe, Akron West, forward.

Earl Thomas, Ashland, center.
Andrew Averitt, Akron West, guard.
Carroll Owen, Columbus North, guard.

CLASS B
Ralph Mix, Castalia, forward.
Herbert Hutchinson, Ostrander, forward.

Charles Slagle, Dayton Fairmont, center.
James Freshwater, Ostrander, guard.
Sheldon Shale, Garrettsville, guard.

Averitt, Thomas and Dye easily were the outstanding players of the tournament.

AVERITT IS BEST
Averitt is a negro and measures six feet in his stockings. He plays a roving guard and has an almost perfect eye. In the Columbus North game, he made 11 of his team's 26 points and his record throughout the tournament was equally as good.

DR. MILES' Effervescent NERVE TABLETS

Several athletic authorities would welcome removal of the tournament from Columbus, it was learned, because it is claimed that the sporting populace of the state capital has been a little chilly toward the high school idols.

A good many Ohio cities have more interest in high school heroes because they do not have the counter-attraction of university athletics, at least not of the type offered by the Western conference, it is believed by some.

The financial return might be greater in another city where high school performers command more attention, it is also argued.

Members of the board of control left the state finals without reaching any definite agreement as to where next year's meet will be held.

Although definite figures are not yet available, the crowd at the week-end play here is believed to have equalled last year's—approximately 13,000. Townsend said. The receipts will be about $7,000.

WOULD AID CROWD
Akron or Dayton would be enthusiastic basketball capitals in view of the fact that both cities had two teams entered in the state finals this year.

Akron West, class A victor, made a parade of the tournament, defeating Columbus North, 26 to 17, in the finals Saturday night. Castalia's little but mighty quintet took the class B title by defeating Ostrander in the final game, 26 to 24, which took over-time minutes to decide.

Unlike the class A champions, Castalia won all their games by one or two points.

SPORTS' BANQUET TO BE THURSDAY

The tickets for the big Pickaway-co Farmer's and Sportmen's Protective Association banquet are selling fast. You had better buy one, which entitles you to put your feet under the big Fish table and makes you a member of the association for one year.

"In Union there is Strength." If we have a big organization we can get most anything we ask from the state to stock our fields and streams. We will have that big association if you become a member.

Don't forget the date for the big fish fry and banquet is Thursday, March 24, at seven o'clock. At the same time and place will be given an illustrated lecture on outdoor life.

Our organization believes a great economic waste has resulted from the depletion of one of our great natural resources—game birds and fish. They believe that by applying sound business methods to this problem and by learning from the experience of other countries which have been faced with an identical problem and solved it satisfactorily, that a substantial and permanent increase in game and fish in this country can be obtained. This will create and assure for the future, greater opportunities for recreation, sport and enjoyment of the great outdoors; and increase in rural land value; a new source of income and provide an important, permanent food supply.

Remember we want you to help us do this by becoming a member, you will then also be affiliated with the State Association. — Contributed.

BAT BATALINO AND PETROLLE TO MEET

NEW YORK, March 21.—Billy Petrolle and Bat Batalino, the two greatest drawing cards seen in a New York ring this year, clash in a 12-round bout at Madison Square garden Thursday night.

The outcome has the experts guessing. In his first appearance as a welterweight recently after relinquishing the featherweight title, Batalino scored an easy victory on points over Eddie Ran. Polish slugger, Ran previously had put up a stiff battle against Petrolle before being knocked out by the Fargo Express.

Petrolle has not been beaten since he lost to Jimmy McLarnin here last summer.

With a sellout assured, ticket prices of Thursday's bout were boosted to scale at $8 tops.

The week's card will be inaugurated at St. Nicholas club tonight when Jack (Kid) Berg, of England makes his first ring appearance since he lost to Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion, last summer Berg meets Buster Brown, Baltimore, in a ten-round bout.

FARM HOUSEWIVES CUT LIVING COSTS

Ohio farm homemakers are keeping down living costs by baking bread, making soap, making over clothing, using foods produced on the farm, and by turning more and more to family and local talent forms of recreation, according to Miss Thelma Beall, extension specialist for the department of home economics at the Ohio State University, who recently conducted home account schools in some 25 counties.

Much of the wheat and corn grown on the farm this year is taken to the local mill and ground for home use, she says. The miller is paid for his work by allowing him a certain percentage of the grains to be ground. Even trips to town are planned ahead so that one trip oftentimes is made to serve for several trips in the past.

Many farm women keeping records of their household expenditures, Miss Beall points out, have found their cost per person per meal. In terms of actual cash outlay the amounts spent for food in these farm families very from 2 to 4 cents per person per meal. If the home canned and stored food used in these meals were valued at what it would sell for before storing or canning, the cost per person per meal would amount to about 7 or 9 cents.

One woman who keeps home account records finds that by utilizing home-grown products she was able to feed two thrashing crews at a cost of 8 or 9 cents per person per meal.

Although hard times has resulted in farm homemakers using more and more of the food they produce on the farm, it has also made for meals containing lots of milk, butter, eggs, and other foods rich in health building qualities.

WARNS AGAINST FAKE PROMOTERS

The success of the farmer cooperative movement and the need for such organizations at the present time are providing encouragement for unscrupulous promoters believes B. A. Wallace, rural economist at the Ohio State University he says that in periods of hard times usually there is an increase in the number of farmer organizations.

The soundness of the cooperative marketing principle is an established fact, he says. It is constantly growing in strength. But its very strength and success should serve to warn farmers to investigate all so-called cooperative marketing ventures before investing their capital in what may turn out to be a plan by unscrupulous promoters.

Because of the increased interest in cooperative marketing and its success, the field provides an opportunity for imitators and fakers. It is best, Wallace states, for the farmer to ask himself several questions when approached to invest in some new cooperative enterprise. On the one hand he must recognize the growing interest of farmers in the marketing problem and that cooperative organizations are doing much to help the farmers meet market demands and to market their products to better advantage. On the other hand he must recognize that a cooperative marketing enterprise is a business venture.

The farmer may well ask, what are the services to be performed by the new cooperative? Are they needed over a period of future years? Can the new cooperative

Court Tournery Scene Uncertain

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—Amid the hurrahing for the new high school basketball champions of Ohio—Akron West and Castalia—it was learned today that the 1932 state finals may be held in Akron or Dayton.

The colorful spectacle that has been staged in Columbus for many years may be moved from this city, for at least a year, because the American Bowling Congress will occupy the Fairgrounds Coliseum during the Friday and Saturday when the state finals are customarily held at that place.

MAY MOVE SCENE

Due to this conflict, the board of control of the Ohio High School athletic association is considering the advisability of holding the championship play-off either in the Akron-Goodyear gym or the Dayton Coliseum.

Commissioner H. R. Townsend said it "is possible" that the tourney may be held in Columbus despite the A. B. C. bowling classic. It might be held in the new Ohio State University gymnasium or in the Columbus auditorium.

Several athletic authorities would welcome removal of the tournament from Columbus. It was learned, because it is claimed that the sporting populace of the state capital has been a little chilly toward the high school idols.

A good many Ohio cities have more interest in high school heroes because they do not have the counter-attraction of university athletics, at least not of the type offered by the Western conference, it is believed by some.

The annual return might be greater in another city where high school performers command more attention, it is also argued.

Members of the board of control left the state finals without reaching any definite agreement as to where next year's meet will be held.

Although definite figures are not yet available, the crowd at the week-end play here is believed to have equalled last year's—approximately 13,000, Townsend said. The receipts will be about $7,000.

WOULD AID CROWD

Akron or Dayton would be enthusiastic basketball capitals in view of the fact that both cities had two teams entered in the state finals this year.

Akron West, class A victor, made a parade of the tournament, defeating Columbus North, 26 to 17, in the finals Saturday night. Castalia's little but mighty quiet took the class B title by defeating Ostrander in the final game, 26 to 24, which took over time minutes to decide.

Unlike the class A champions, Castalia won all their games by one or two points.

ALL-STAR 5S ARE SELECTED

Akron West Places Andy Averitt, Art Labbe; North Places Curley Owen.

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—Belated mythical honors came to 10 basketball players today as newspaper sports writers "covering" the annual state basketball tournament here confirmed their selections for the all Ohio high school cage-teams. They were:

CLASS A
William Dye, Pomeroy, forward.
Arthur Labbe, Akron West, forward.
Earl Thomas, Ashland; center.
Andrew Averitt, Akron West, guard.
Carroll Owen, Columbus North, guard.

CLASS B
Ralph Mix, Castalia, forward.
Herbert Hutchinson, Ostrander, forward.
Charles Slagle, Dayton Fairmont, center.
James Freshwater, Ostrander, guard.
Sheldon Shale, Garrettsville, guard.

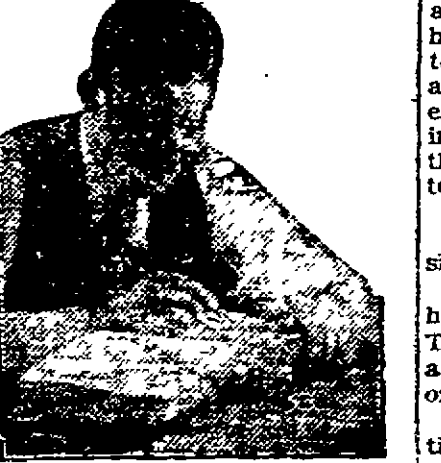

Averitt, Thomas and Dye easily were the outstanding players of the tournament.

AVERITT IS BEST
Averitt is a negro and measures six feet in his stockings. He plays a roving guard and has an almost perfect eye. In the Columbus North game, he made 11 of his team's 26 points and his record throughout the tournament was equally as good.

On the one hand he must recognize the growing interest of farmers in the marketing problem and that cooperative organizations are doing much to help the farmers meet market demands and to market their products to better advantage. On the other hand he must recognize that a cooperative marketing enterprise is a business venture.

The farmer may well ask, what are the services to be performed by the new cooperative? Are they needed over a period of future years? Can the new cooperative

Watch Next week's advertising for something new and unusual.

Friends:—

This is the last week of the LEND-A-HAND 8-week campaign. To say that we have been deeply gratified by the result is to put it mildly. We are more than satisfied. Many, many new friends have been made for our store, and our old friends have told us that we are giving better values than ever before.

It is a happy circumstance that our LEND-A-HAND Campaign for the churches should end on Easter Week, one of the most important of the church holidays. We suggest that you turn in your Lend-A-Hand card on Sunday to the treasurer of your church organization to help swell the Easter offering of your church.

Various churches and church societies will receive when the returns are all in, a very handsome sum as the result of this campaign. How great this amount will be we cannot yet say. REMEMBER, WHETHER YOUR CARDS ARE ENTIRELY FILLED, OR NOT, YOU CAN

TURN THEM IN TO THE TREASURER OF YOUR CHURCH ORGANIZATION ON EASTER SUNDAY AND THEY WILL BE PAID FOR AS THEY STAND. The cards must all be in our hands before April first.

Thanking you all, and with best wishes,

Mr. & Mrs. W. H. Funk

Routt with Dr. Oliver went out leaving word for other officers to follow. The capture was unique and rapid. It was quickly seen neither of the autos had been used in the bank robbery but the officers went ahead anyway, armed with high-powered rifles and tear gas bombs.

"Cleve Craft and Ben Simmons were spotted at the lunch room counter by Routt, who stuck his revolver in Craft's back and keeping his prisoner between him and Simmons, managed, with the aid of a boy who was in the lunch room at the time, to get the pair handcuffed. A part of a pint of whiskey, $87 and a 5 master key were found on Craft. He ascended to the rooms overhead, but discovered the other bandit suspects were not there. He called Dr. Oliver to stand guard and went to make a further search.

"In response to the captured pair's pleas that the manacles were too tight and hurting them, Dr. Oliver left to get a key to loosen them. Meanwhile, Kline entered, followed shortly by Routt, who got the drop on him and removed a .38 calibre revolver off him. It contained five regular cartridges, one tear gas cartridge. A half pint of whiskey and five master keys were also taken off him.

ROUTT USED RIFLE

"The other two men, John Craft and John Norman, were spotted by Routt about a square from the lunch room. Waving a young girl pedestrian to the side, the deputy took aim and ordered them to return. Routt, an expert shot, had a 250-3000 Savage rifle in his hand. A tear gas pen, loaded, was taken off Norman, but nothing was found on Craft.

Chief of Police O. A. Maughmer and Bank Detective George Hannan, learning of the case, arrived shortly after the capture was effected.

Reported Alive After 7 Years

After having been believed dead for seven years, Colonel P. H. Fawcett, famous English explorer, and his son John, who set out to explore the Brazilian jungles in 1925, are now said to be alive. The Fawcetts made the Brazilian expedition in search of a superior white Indian civilization, which is believed to have survived in the jungle fastnesses. But they were never heard of until recently, when the British Consul at Sao Paulo, Brazil, announced that a jungle trapper had reported to him that he had spoken with a man who said he was Fawcett.

Cleve Craft and Simmons were returned to Chillicothe by Hannan and Dr. Oliver, Chief Maughmer too charge of Joan Craft, while Routt brought Kline and Norman in.

Cleve held up Shank, slugged him in the head and stole $18 from him, last September. He has been sought ever since.

STOLE CHICKENS
The quintet stole a number of chickens from a Mrs. Ellis, at Middle Ford, Hocking-co Thursday, it is said and disposed of them at the Scioto Valley Poultry company for $25. One of the men whose name was not disclosed confessed that they had stolen a lot of chickens in Hocking-co March 11 and sold them to a Columbus poultry house for $80.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S TRAVELS

I am Lord Fairfax," said the gentleman in the center, "and this is my friend Colonel Washington. May we have the honor to know your name?"
"I am Benjamin Franklin."
The Postmaster General of the Colonies had just dismounted from an uneasy horse remarking that he preferred "two certain legs to four uncertain ones." This simple introduction marked the meeting of two men about whom the world was to hear much in the future. The place: Fort Cumberland, Maryland on U. S. Route 1.

ONE of the many historical pick-ups along the road is this boulder, located on U. S. 40 near Braddock Heights, westbound from Frederick, Maryland. Here Lieut. Col. Washington rested his troops on the way to Fort Duquesne in 1755. Silent guns today mark the way of American history in the making. This is an old Braddock gun at Winchester, Virginia.

Decline In Income Taxes

BEFORE congress passes a new revenue bill the treasury probably will know, on the basis of the March reports, how much income taxes will be forthcoming from the current fiscal year. That knowledge will aid in the formulation of a tax plan and might contribute either to the passage or defeat of such a plan.

During the first eight months of the current fiscal year income taxes yielded $638,121,300. There are yet to be collected in this fiscal year two installments of the tax on the anaemic incomes of 1931. It is estimated that the total yield for the year will be $900,000,000. Income tax receipts two years ago totaled two and one-half times that amount and nearly twice as much last year.

None expects the income tax returns for 1931 incomes to do anything else but fortify the treasury's demands for higher taxes or for a drastic cut in federal expenditures. The former involves other levies than higher income rates and the latter means drastic salary cuts, and a general retrenchment in governmental activities and employment. The suggested alternative of more borrowing is untenable as a threat to national credit, which must not be impaired at all costs.

Taxation is the true test of a democracy. Partisan politics and political expediency may dictate the next tax plan or the American principle and ideal of equal taxation for all may prevail. Whether democracy wins depends upon whether a majority of congressmen are strong or weak, far-sighted or near-sighted.

Prices Hit Bottom

EVEN depressions have their compensations. Being forced to accept reduced profits or a cut in wages is tragic, but some of the sting is taken off if living costs fall to the level of the income and outgo of the pre-boom days.

Salaries, wages and profits of many are back where they were a decade ago, but food prices in general are hovering about the price level of two decades ago. The dollar of January, 1932, purchased as much or more of eight staple commodities shows that the consumer's dollar now buys more butter, eggs, lard, rice, sugar and electricity than in 1913, and it the same quantity of pork chops, flour and potatoes. In every instance this year's prices are below those of 1929.

There are some exceptions to this favorable comparison—from the consumer's viewpoint—between 1913 and 1932 prices. Plate beef, sliced bacon and coffee are a little higher, fresh milk, cornmeal, anhydrous ammonia and manufactured gas are considerably higher. The survey did not cover rents, which are still clinging tenaciously to the high ledge of the inflation period although they have begun to drop a little.

Predictions by economists that prices will drop still lower are based on those items which still remain comparatively high and do not refer to prices which have already reached the 1913 level.

Danger In Tires

IT has been pretty definitely established that the rear right tire is the first to wear out the rear left next, the front right next and the front left last of all.

As a result, practice has become almost general to shift the worn out rear tires to the front wheels with the idea of evening up the rear.

This, however, is dangerous. When a worn tire blows out on a rear wheel while the car is traveling at a high rate of speed, the driver still has enough control of the front wheels to guide the car safely out of a dangerous slide.

When, however a front lets go, and the car is moving fast, there is almost nothing the driver can do. Steering is thrown out of his control, the car is forced into a serious skid and there is great possibility of injuries to all in the car.

Rather leave a worn out tire on a rear wheel, even though it will wear down so much faster, than risk the dangers that go with changing it to the front. For greater safety, however, a tire that shows the first mark of a tread worn down to the fabric should be taken off and used only as a spare.

Even as a spare, it should be in use only long enough to get a good replacement.

"The GAY BANDIT of the BORDER"

by TOM GILL

COPYRIGHT 1931, BY INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE CO., INC. — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Under the leadership of "El Coyote," the masked bandit, the Mexican ranchers plan to overthrow the wealthy Paco Morales, who has confiscated their property for years. All search for "El Coyote" has been in vain. Ted Radcliffe, a young American whose father Morales ruined, loves the Spaniard's beautiful niece, Adela. Jito, Morales' ward, is jealous. Bob Harkness, a friend of Ted's late father, urges Ted not to quarrel with Morales, as he has other plans. Following a raid on the village by Jito's vaqueros, one of his men is killed by Anton, an Indian. Morales, fearing the vengeance of the tribe, releases Anton. Out riding, Adela tells Ted she disapproves of her uncle's treatment of the peons. Ted considers Adela's wealth a barrier between them, but she tells him to let nothing interfere when he falls in love. Ted is forced to shoot his horse after a fall. He and Adela get lost and spend the night in the desert.

CHAPTER XXVII

Do boys ever have such foolish dreams?" "Sometimes. What was your dashing rescuer like?" "Oh, he was always changing. I was very fickle about my escorts. At times he was dark and spoke in Spanish and had a mandolin hung over his saddle, and sometimes he was slender and soft-voiced and had blue eyes. Yes, there were all kinds. After all, why limit yourself to one man in your dreams? But then, you see, I've never known men except the gilded youths of Mexico City, where uncle was in school in the States, my uncle gave strict orders. She looked up with those frank blue eyes. "You know, besides Don Bob, I've never really known any Americans."

"No gringos?" He smiled. She shook her head. "Certainly no very nice ones—like you." Ted threw mesquite on the fire until it leaped again and crackled like a thousand roasting chestnuts. On the farther side of the fire he spread out the girl's poncho and placed the saddle at its head. The saddle-blanket was already dry and warm from the flames, and this he laid over the poncho. The result he contemplated dubiously. "I've seen softer-looking beds, but it will be warm enough unless the night turns cool. Try it."

Obediently she rolled up in the blanket and laid her head on the saddle. Looking up she made a face at him. "This isn't going to be either warm or soft, big man, but it's life in the great Southwest." She closed her eyes. "Dios, but I'm tired," she murmured. For an hour Ted sat smoking and at last, replenishing the fire with wood, he lay down beside it. Already the girl's eyes were closed, and her hands were clasped about the saddlehorn. He stooped and pulled the blanket higher about her throat, for a cool current of air was pouring down out of the mountains. For a brief second she opened her eyes. "You're a dear," she told him, and went to sleep again.

Dawn had already brightened into sunrise when Ted awoke. He arose, cold and stiff from hours on the hard sand, and looked about him. Mist was still rising from the desert, and as yet the sunlight held no warmth. Tethered in a clump of mesquite, the mare raised her head and whinnied impatiently.

Ted looked up. "I know," he said half aloud, "you're hungry and thirsty, and you've got nothing on me." A rustling in the saddle blanket made him turn. Two sleepy eyes were being rubbed, and a mop of hair frantically smoothed into submission.

"Nothing could spoil it," he answered. For a long moment they stood silent close to each other, scarcely breathing. Their lips made no sound, spoke no word, while a message, formless but infinitely precious, passed between them as they stood there on the desert's edge. Then together they walked toward the horse, still waiting in silent disapproval of delay. As he stooped to hold her stirrup, Adela laid both hands on Ted's shoulders. In her own eyes he caught a shadow of foreboding. He felt her fingers tighten for a moment.

"It has been good, this being alone together back in the hills. I want to feel there is a bond between us, two whatever comes." Her fingers, still clinging, slipped down his arms, then

"I couldn't endure a quarrel between you two," she said.

"If you look at me now I'll take the veil," a sleepy voice warned him. "These open-work dressing-rooms have their drawbacks." So he set about arranging what little he had left of the food, and slowly saddled Adela's mare. At last he came back to the gray embers of the fire, and at her low laugh looked up. "She was pulling on her boots. 'When uncle catches up with us, all that has ever happened is going to seem dull and tame,' she said, and for no reason at all she hummed a Spanish song. 'When Jito catches up, I'll have a first-hand duel on my hands,' he prophesied, 'and perhaps another with your uncle.' 'Oh no. Uncle would never descend to anything so uncertain. He'll just order his vaqueros to tear you to pieces.' Then, suddenly serious, she added, 'It is possible that Jito will be raving when he finds us together. I'm depending on you to help me. Even if it's terribly hard for you.' 'I promise. But if he comes at me with blood in his eyes, I may have to do a little shadow boxing.' 'He must not. I couldn't endure a quarrel between you two.' Her hand touched his arm and she looked up at him. 'Out here in this desert country one hasn't too many friends. Our friendship, it has been a very beautiful beginning. I don't want anything to spoil it.' 'Nothing could spoil it," he answered. For a long moment they stood silent close to each other, scarcely breathing. Their lips made no sound, spoke no word, while a message, formless but infinitely precious, passed between them as they stood there on the desert's edge. Then together they walked toward the horse, still waiting in silent disapproval of delay.

As he stooped to hold her stirrup, Adela laid both hands on Ted's shoulders. In her own eyes he caught a shadow of foreboding. He felt her fingers tighten for a moment. "It has been good, this being alone together back in the hills. I want to feel there is a bond between us, two whatever comes." Her fingers, still clinging, slipped down his arms, then uddenly she released him and swung into the saddle. "I'm going to ride the first hour and you'll ride the second hour," she told him, as they turned toward the dark outline of Eagle Rock. "Even in riding boots I can walk with a fine swinging stride that's a joy to see." But walking was to prove unnecessary. Far down among the mesquite they first saw a faint movement that neared and became a cavalcade of people and horses slowly making its way out of the desert up toward the slopes these two were descending. For a time they watched the slow, trudging figures, then Adela clasped her hands in delight. "It's Anton, and his Yaquis, returning to their mountain home. He will let you have something with four legs."

Ted's thoughts flashed back to the encounter between the Yaqui and Morales two nights ago. For a moment he hesitated. But already one of Anton's men caught sight of them and called back to the others. At almost at once three warriors detached themselves and pounded up the slope at a dead run. Anton himself greeted them, holding the hand of each a moment in his own while he listened silently to the girl's tale. At times his black eyes turned to the man beside her, but always they returned to Adela. At last he stepped forward and put the reins of his own horse in Ted's hand. "Yours to ride," he announced in curt, unaccustomed English, and there was a great friendliness in his smile. "My young men follow tomorrow and bring horse back." Then he turned to the girl, speaking in Spanish too rapid and low for Ted to understand. At the end he touched the girl's hand, nodded to Radcliffe, and before either of them could thank him had jumped up behind the horse of one of his braves.

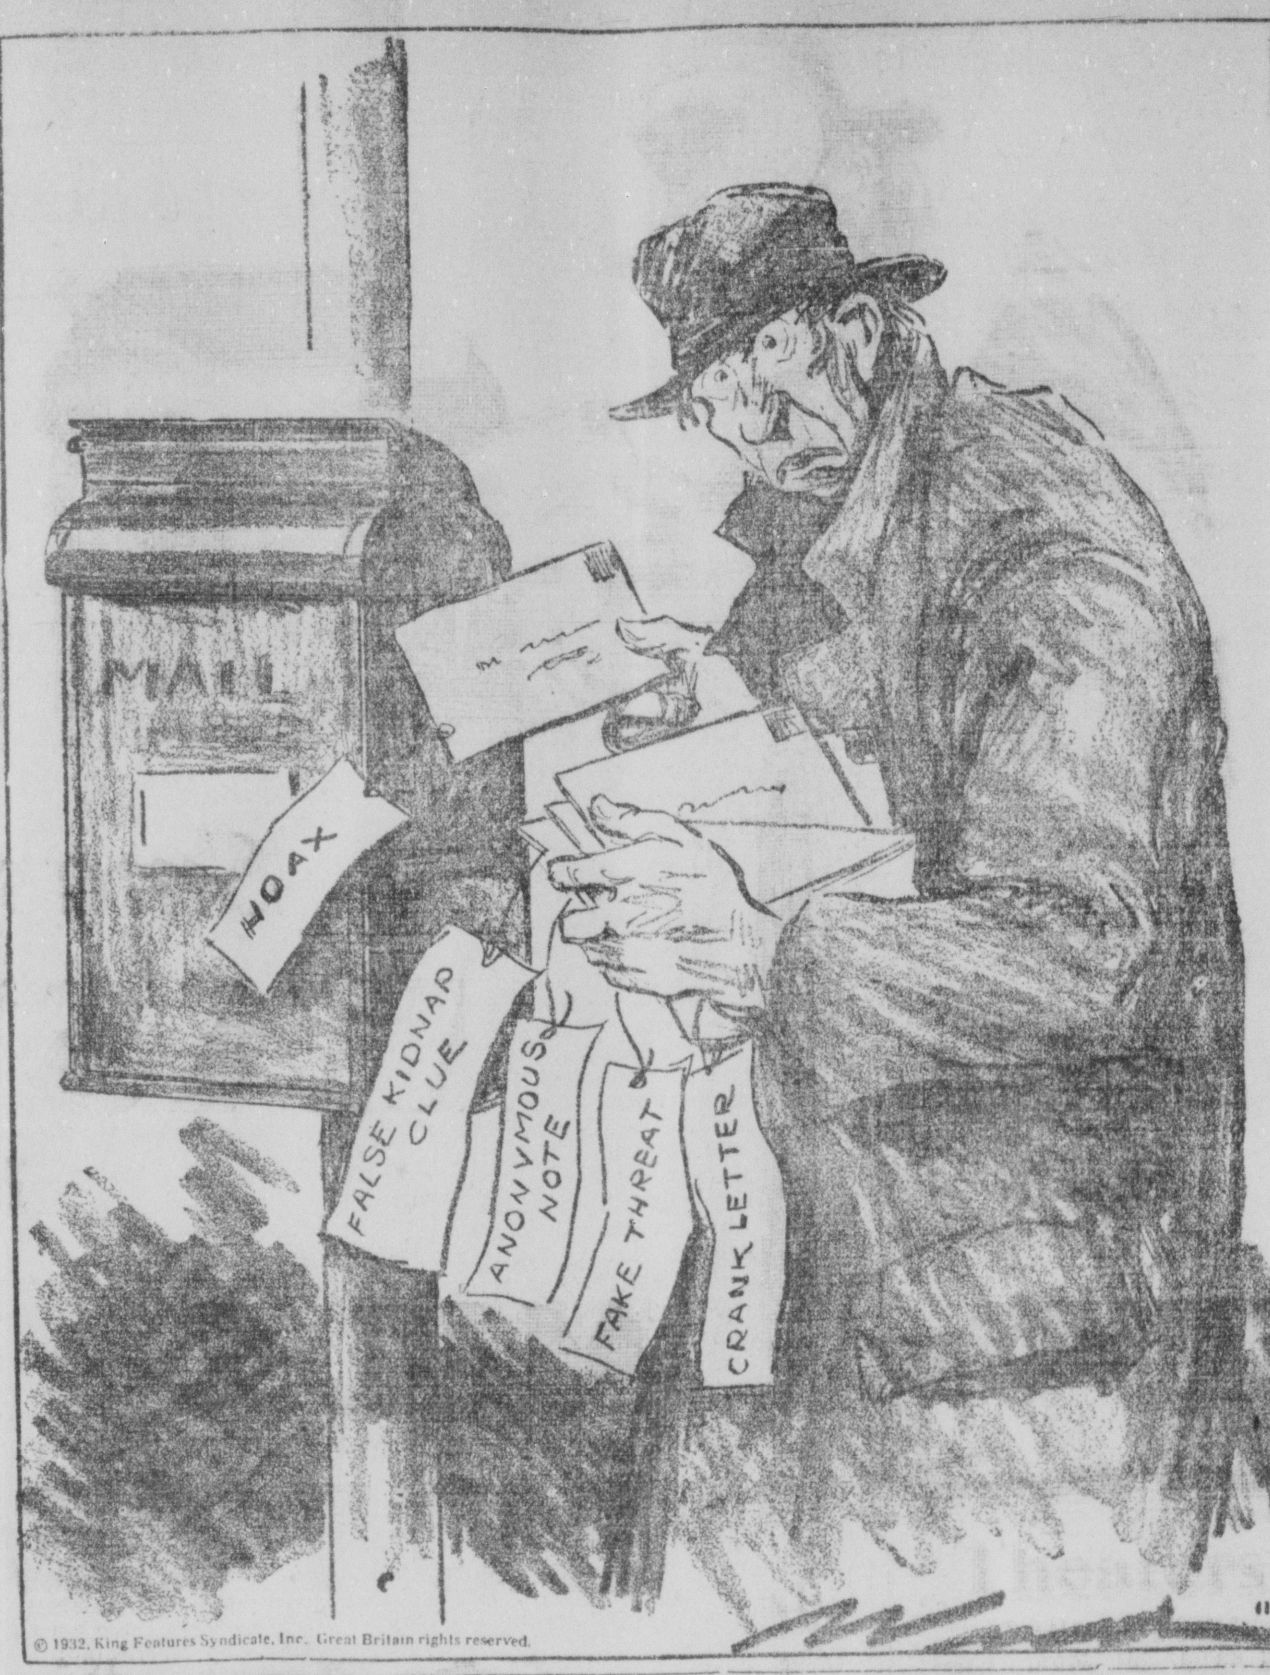

Ted mounted. "That's what I call service. What did Anton say?" "He was telling me the way and offering to lend me one of his men to go with us. But we don't need them. According to Anton, two hours' ride will put us in sight of the hacienda. And now let's see what that Indian pony's good for." (To Be Continued)

"It's Great to Be Straight" Is Slogan for Good Health

Study of Correct Posture in Standing, Sitting or Walking Is Most Important, as a Means of Preventing or Curing Many Ailments, and Increasing Vitality

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A LEADING college for women recently held a posture contest. This is an annual event and arouses great interest. The students have adopted the slogan "It's great to be straight." I wish that the truth of this slogan could be realized by everyone and that more attention would be paid to the importance of posture. Many persons do not hold themselves properly. They pay no attention to the importance of good posture while standing, sitting or walking. This is unfortunate, because good body posture is important to health. Faulty posture is a common cause of many physical disturbances. Nausea, headache, lack of appetite, "biliousness" and nervousness are a few of the minor complaints caused by poor posture. Constipation, a common complaint, is often overcome by correcting body posture. Frequently backaches, referred to as rheumatism, are merely pains caused by improper positions assumed in walking, standing and sitting. Often abdominal pain and back-pain are confused with organic disturbances, when actually they are caused by the irritation of the spinal nerves due to bad posture. When correct posture is maintained, pain and discomfort disappear, the digestive disturbances are cured, and the individual gains weight and no longer has vague and annoying complaints. There is an increase in "pep" and vitality. There are only a few fundamental rules for good posture. If you will follow them I am sure you will notice an improvement in your health and an increased ease in your daily work. When you walk draw in your abdomen, chest out, shoulders high and square, and chin straight forward. Do not hold yourself in an awkward position, but be thoroughly relaxed so that the arms swing as you walk. If you want to be sure that your posture is correct, remember that if an imaginary plumb line is dropped from the side of the head it should pass through the ear and the middle of the shoulder, hip, knee and ankle bone.

Good Posture and Health

Always sit in a comfortable chair and never slouch or sprawl over a table. Flatten the hollow of the back by rolling the hip bones backward and downward.

It is now an accepted fact that many of the diseases of childhood and many of the diseases and deformities of later life are caused by neglecting to correct faulty posture in childhood. This problem grows as the improvements and comforts of modern life increase. The child of today does not resort to as much physical exercise as his father did when a youngster. This is a pity. Posture classes are conducted in all schools. The education must be continued at home if any benefit is to be expected. Help your child to acquire good posture, but never scold him for faulty posture. It is not enough merely to command a child to stand up straight. Show him what the correct position is and encourage him to walk, sit and stand correctly.

A good plan is to have a home contest and award prizes for the best posture maintained at all times. Remember that poor posture is mainly a bad habit. It can be overcome by continued conscientious effort. Copyright, 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The Daily Horoscope

Monday, March 21, 1932

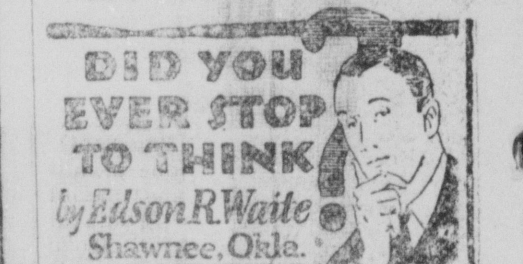

If this were a business day we should expect a great deal of activity on the stock market. As it is, the sheer pleasure of taking a chance may cause many people to swim off the deep end. Strange and fantastic notions may be abroad today, and the lover of truth will find it beneficial to be very critical. The most practical minds may indulge in fanciful imaginations and be subject to self-deception. The afternoon should bring more traffic on the roads than many a previous Sunday. A general tendency to be up and off, to take to the highway and byways, is indicated. Those who are receptive to new ideas may pick up valuable information today and it would pay everyone to keep their ears open. The children born on this day are seerative and psychic in nature. They usually know more than they are given credit for. They develop practically early in life. Many such children leave school while still very young to make money. In middle age they seem to be wizards in dealing with stock manipulations. These children need, above all, a good education. A few of the many great people born on this date are: Henrik Ibsen, Norwegian dramatist and poet, 1828. Charles William Elliott, American Educator and President of Harvard, 1834.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

To the Editor of The Herald: I notice by the paper a news item which says that the Literary Digest poll shows that 41 States are in favor of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment to the constitution of our country. The Reds are also in favor of repealing the first ten, but that doesn't mean that they will succeed in doing so. Only eight per cent of the ballots sent out by this magazine were returned. If the country is so overwhelmingly wet it would seem that more of them would avail themselves of the opportunity of saying so. What about the other 92 per cent?

At the recent National Conference of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in Columbus the National President, Mrs. Ella A. Doole announced that she had never received a Literary Digest ballot. A vote was taken which showed that very few women present had received them, but some strange facts were revealed. The husbands of three women had received ballots—said husbands had been dead ten, six and five years respectively. The husband of another woman present had received ten ballots. A Post Master in an Ohio town reported a thousand ballots sent to folks who could not be found. Same, law-abiding American mothers and fathers, with the best interests of their boys and girls at heart are not going to be stampeded by a lot of folks who want gold at any price. Let the "Liquorary Liges" stick to news.

Respectfully,
Mrs. Maude E. Maxey

Good will, we are told, is the ultimate solution of the problems facing those who have been placed in charge of great countries. In short, it offers a way out of all the material problems in which this age or any age is faced. It is thought that ethical and moral problems will respond to this idealistic treatment. The greatest advantage of Christianity considered in comparison to the philosophies of other religions is the fact of good will as a corner-stone. The fact is that Christianity converted good will from a personal instinct into requirement of human relations. This good will which we cultivate really furnishes the answer to a perplexed world upon most questions. It gives one, if one has nothing more definite, a workable, moral philosophy. GOOD WILL IS A MATTER OF WISHING THE OTHER MAN WELL.

Odds and Ends

The sales tax may send certain presidential prospect a-sailing. Apparently North Dakota, Democratic aren't interested in alfalfa. There are just two philosophies of life. Do unto others and do others.

And many people think they are good merely because they are tired of sinning. One reason why success goes to the head is because nature doesn't like a vacuum.

Golfers and woodpeckers are the only birds using heads to get into the hole. About the only place where a conservative is handicapped it at the necktie counter. Man works hard to establish a credit and then frequently finds it too good for his good. Keeping shoes shined is expensive, but at least you needn't check them when you go in to lunch.

After a "psychological experiment," during which a group of men and women lived together for two months in a two-room cottage at Portage, Wis., Margery Latimer (above), Columbia University graduate and authoress of note, married Jean Toomer, colored psychologist and essayist, who conducted the experiment. Toomer is listed in the "Negro Anthology" as one of the foremost intellectuals of that race.

Decline in Income Taxes

BEFORE congress passes a new revenue bill the treasury probably will know, on the basis of the March reports, how much revenue will be forthcoming from income taxes during the remainder of the current fiscal year. That knowledge will aid in the formulation of a tax plan and might contribute either to the passage or defeat of such a plan.

During the first eight months of the current fiscal year income taxes yielded $638,121,300. There are yet to be collected in this fiscal year two installments of the tax on the annual incomes of 1931. It is estimated that the total yield for the year will be $900,000,000 income tax receipts two years ago totaled two and one-half times that amount and nearly twice as much last year.

None expects the income tax returns for 1931 incomes to do anything else but fortify the treasury's demands for higher taxes or for a drastic cut in federal expenditures. The former involves other levies than higher income rates and the latter means drastic salary cuts, and a general retrenchment in governmental activities and employment. The suggested alternative of more borrowing is untenable as a threat to national credit, which must not be impaired at all costs.

Taxation is the true test of a democracy. Partisan politics and political expediency may dictate the next tax plan or the American principle and ideal of equal taxation for all may prevail. Whether democracy wins depends upon whether a majority of congressmen are strong or weak, far-sighted or near-sighted.

Prices Hit Bottom

EVEN depressions have their compensations. Being forced to accept reduced profits or a cut in wages is tragic, but some of the sting is taken off if living costs fall to the level of the income and outgo of the pre-boom days.

Salaries, wages and profits of many are back where they were a decade ago; but food prices in general are hovering about the price level of two decades ago. The cost of living, 1932, purchased as much or more of eight stable commodities shows that the consumer's dollar now buys more butter, eggs, lard, rice, sugar and electricity than in 1913, and the same quantity of pork chops, flour and potatoes. In every instance this year's prices are below those of 1929.

There are some exceptions to this favorable comparison—from the consumer's viewpoint—between 1913 and 1932 prices. Plate beef, sliced bacon and coffee are a little higher, fresh milk, cornmeal, antacid and bituminous coal and manufactured gas are considerably higher. The survey did not cover rents, which are still clinging tenaciously to the high ledge of the inflation period although they have begun to drop a little.

Predictions by economists that prices will drop still lower are based on those items which still remain comparatively high and do not refer to prices which have already reached the 1913 level.

Danger in Tires

It has been pretty definitely established that the rear right tire is the first to wear out the rear left next, the front right next and the front left last of all.

As a result, practice has become almost general to shift the worn out rear tires to the front wheels with the idea of evening up the rear.

Thus, however, is dangerous. When a worn tire blows out on a rear wheel while the car is traveling at a high rate of speed, the driver still has enough control of the front wheels to guide the car safely out of a dangerous skid.

When, however, a front tire goes, and the car is moving fast, there is almost nothing the driver can do. Steering is thrown out of his control, the car is forced into a spin and there is great possibility of injuries to all in the car.

Rather leave a worn out tire on a rear wheel, even though it will wear down so much faster, than risk the dangers that go with changing it to the front. For greater safety, however, a tire that shows the first mark of a tread worn down to the fabric of a tread should be taken off and used only as a spare.

Even as a spare, it should be in use only long enough to get a good replacement.

"The GAY BANDIT of the BORDER"

by TOM GILL

Copyright 1931, by International Magazine Co., Inc. — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

Under the leadership of "El Coyote," the masked bandit, the Mexican ranchers plan to overthrow the wealthy Peco Morales, who has confiscated their property for years. All search for "El Coyote" has been in vain. Ted Radcliffe, a young American whose father Morales ruined, loves the Spaniard's beautiful niece, Adela. Jito, Morales' ward, is jealous of Bob Harkness, a friend of Ted's late father, and urges Ted not to quarrel with Morales, as he has other plans. Following a raid on the village by Jito's vaqueros, one of his men is killed by Anton, an Indian. Morales, fearing the vengeance of the tribe, releases Anton. Out riding, Adela tells Ted she disapproves of her uncle's treatment of the peons. Ted considers Adela's wealth a barrier between them, but she tells him to let nothing interfere when he falls in love. Ted is forced to shoot his horse after a fall. He and Adela get lost and spend the night in the desert.

CHAPTER XXVII

Do boys ever have such foolish dreams?

"Sometimes. What was your dashing rescuer like?"

"Oh, he was always changing. I was very fickle about my escorts. At times he was dark and spoke in Spanish and had a mandolin hung over his saddle, and sometimes he was slender and soft-voiced and had blue eyes. Yes, there were all kinds. After all, why limit yourself to one man in your dreams? But then, you see, I've never known men except the guided youths of Mexico City, where Uncle sent me each year. Even when I was in school in the States, my uncle gave strict orders. 'She looked up with those frank blue eyes. 'You know, besides Don Bob, I've never really known any Americans.'"

"No gringos?" He smiled.

"She shook her head. 'Certainly not very nice ones—like you.'"

Ted threw mesquite on the fire until it leaped again and crackled like a thousand roasting chestnuts. On the farther side of the fire he spread out the girl's poncho and placed the saddle at its head. The saddle-blanket was already dry and warm from the flames, and this he laid over the poncho. The result he contemplated dubiously.

"I've seen softer-looking beds, but it will be warm enough unless the night turns cold. Try it."

Obediently she rolled up in the blanket and laid her head on the saddle. Looking up she made a face at him.

"This isn't going to be either warm or soft, big man, but it's life in the great Southwest."

She closed her eyes. "Dios, but I'm tired," she murmured.

For an hour Ted sat smoking and at last, replenishing the fire with wood, he lay down beside it. Already the girl's eyes were closed, and her hands were clasped about the saddle-horn. He stooped and pulled the blanket higher about her throat, for a cool current of air was pouring down out of the mountains. For a brief second she opened her eyes.

"You're a dear," she told him, and went to sleep again.

Dawn had already brightened into sunrise when Ted awoke. He arose, cold and stiff from hours on the hard sand, and looked about him. His was still rising from the desert, and as yet the sunlight held no warmth. Tethered in a clump of mesquite, the mare raised her head and whinnied impatiently.

Ted looked up. "I know," he said half aloud, "you're hungry and thirsty, and you've got nothing on me."

A rustling in the saddle blanket made him turn. Two sleepy eyes were being rubbed, and a mop of hair frantically smoothed into submission.

"I couldn't endure a quarrel between you two," she said.

"If you look at me now I'll take the veil," a sleepy voice warned him. "These open-work dressing-rooms have their drawbacks."

So he set about arranging what little he had left of the food, and slowly saddled Adela's mare. At last he came back to the gray embers of the fire, and at her low laugh looked up.

She was pulling on her boots. "When Uncle catches up with us, all that has ever happened is going to seem dull and tame," she said, and for no reason at all she hummed a Spanish song.

"When Jito catches up, I'll have a first-class duel on my hands," he prophesied, "and perhaps another with your uncle."

"Oh no. Uncle would never descend to anything so uncertain. He'll just order his vaqueros to tear you to pieces." Then, suddenly serious, she added, "It is possible that Jito will be raving when he finds us together. I'm depending on you to help me. Even if it's terribly hard for you."

"I promise. But if he comes at me with blood in his eyes, I may have to do a little shadow boxing."

"He must not. I couldn't endure a quarrel between you two."

Her hand touched his arm and she looked up at him. "Out here in this desert country one hasn't too many friends. Our friendship, it has been a very beautiful beginning. I don't want anything to spoil it."

"Nothing could spoil it," he answered. For a long moment they stood silent close to each other, scarcely breathing. Their lips made no sound, spoke no word, while a message formless but infinitely precious, passed between them as they stood there on the desert's edge. Then together they walked toward the horse, still waiting in silent disapproval of delay.

As he stooped to hold her stirrup, Adela laid both hands on Ted's shoulders. In her own eyes he caught a shadow of forbidding. He felt her fingers tighten for a moment.

"It has been good, this being alone together back in the hills. I want to feel there is a bond between us two, whatever comes." Her fingers, still clinging, slipped down his arms, then oddly she released him and swung into the saddle.

"I'm going to ride the first hour and you'll ride the second hour," she told him, as they turned toward the dark outline of Eagle Rock. "Even in riding boots I can walk with a fine swinging stride that's a joy to see."

But walking was to prove unnecessary. Far down among the mesquites they first saw a faint movement that neared and became a cavalcade of people and horses slowly making its way out of the desert toward the slopes these two were descending. For a time they watched the slow, trudging figures, then Adela clasped her hands in delight and called back to the others. "It's Anton and his Yaquis. He will let you have something with four legs."

Ted's thoughts flashed back to the encounter between the Yaqui and Morales two nights ago. For a moment he hesitated. But already one of Anton's men caught sight of them and called back to the others. All most at once three warriors detached themselves and pounded up the slope at a dead run. Anton himself greeted them, holding the hand of each in moment in his own while he listened silently to the girl's tale. At times his black eyes turned to the man beside her, but always they returned to Adela. At last he stepped forward and put the reins of his own horse in Ted's hand.

"Yours to ride," he announced in curt, unaccustomed English, and there was a great friendliness in his smile. "My young men follow tomorrow and bring horse back." Then he turned to the girl, speaking in Spanish too rapid and low for Ted to understand. At the end he touched the girl's hand, nodded to Radcliffe, and before either of them could thank him had jumped up behind the horse of one of his braves.

Ted mounted. "That's what I call service. What did Anton say?"

"He was telling me the way and offering to lend me one of his men to go with us. But we don't need them. According to Anton, two hours' ride will put us in sight of the hacienda. And now let's see what that Indian pony's good for."

"It's Great to Be Straight" Is Slogan for Good Health

Study of Correct Posture in Standing, Sitting or Walking Is Most Important, as a Means of Preventing or Curing Many Ailments, and Increasing Vitality

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
 United States Senator from New York
 Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

A LEADING college for women recently held a posture contest. This is an annual event and arouses great interest. The students have adopted the slogan "It's great to be straight!"

I wish that the truth of this slogan could be realized by everyone and that more attention would be paid to the importance of posture. Many persons do not hold themselves properly. They walk in a slouchy manner. They pay no attention to the importance of good posture while standing, sitting or walking. This is unfortunate, because good body posture is important to health.

Faulty posture is a common cause of many physical disturbances. Nausea, headache, lack of appetite, "business" and nervousness are a few of the minor complaints caused by poor posture. Constipation is a common complaint is often overcome by correcting body posture.

When correct posture is maintained, part of discomfort disappears, the digestive disturbances are cured, and the individual gains weight and no longer has vague and

Theaters

AT THE CLIFTONA

Hand props, the things people carry in their hands when they travel, had to be supplied by the hundreds for the three thousand extra and bit players who appear briefly or more or less continuously in "Union Depot," the latest First National picture featuring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Joan Blondell now at the Cliftona Theatre today and tomorrow.

Almost the entire story is told inside the confines of a great station and practically everyone in or passing through a depot has a bundle or article in his or her hands.

Umbrellas, canes, books and boxes of candy, bird cages and the rest for dinner, purses and pocket lighters, cigars and cameras, time tables and telegrams, carpet bags and packages wrapped in newspapers, bananas and baby bottles, violin cases and golf bags, newspapers and Pullman tickets, ear trumpets and cork legs, lap dogs and hip flasks, all of these and many more were included in the supply of "hand props" which property man Scotty gathered for this one picture.

Some of them have a vital bearing on the development of the story. All of them will be seen momentarily at least, in the finished version of "Union Depot."

AT THE GRAND
 If past performances mean anything in motion pictures, "Sob Sister," Fox drama at the Grand Theatre, should be one of the season's outstanding pictures.

Two members of its cast had important roles in the recent Fox success, "Bad Girl," namely James Dunn, whose portrayal of the overnight star, and Mamma Gombrell, who played Edna the friend.

Edwin Burke, who received the praise of the critics for his "Bad Girl" dialogue, also wrote the dialogue for "Sob Sister" and Alfred Sintell who directed Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter in "Daddy Long Legs" directed the production.

Another brilliant star, known to Broadway audiences, but new to motion pictures fans, makes her debut in the title role of "Sob Sister." She is Miss Linda Watkins who proved a stage sensation in the Broadway show "June Moon."

Other members of the large cast are Howard Phillips, George E. Stone, Sarah Padden, Harry Beresford, Lee Lindsey and Eddie Dillon, among others.

The sales tax may send certain business firms to a-sailing. Apparently North Dakota, where the tax is not levied, is a popular place to do unto others and do others unto.

Many people think they are merely because they are the "only" place where a "hand" is needed at the pro-life center.

Man works hard to establish a credit and then frequently finds it too good for his good.

Keeping shoes shined is expensive but at least you needn't check them as you go in to lunch.

The children need, above all, good education.

LETTERS TO EDITOR

To the Editor of The Herald:
 I notice by the paper a news item which says that the Literary Digest poll shows that 41 States are in favor of the repeal of the eighteenth amendment to the constitution of our country. The Reds are also in favor of repealing the first ten, but that doesn't mean that they will succeed in doing so. Only eight per cent of the ballots sent out by this magazine were returned. If the country is so overwhelmingly in favor of repealing the first ten, it would seem that more of them would avail themselves of the opportunity of saying so. What about the other 92 per cent?

At the recent National Conference of the Women's Christian Temperance Union in Columbus the National President, Mrs. Ella A. Doole announced that she had never received a Literary Digest ballot. A vote was taken which showed that very few women present had received them, but some strange facts were revealed. The husbands of three women had received ballots—said husbands had been dead ten, six and five years respectively. The husband of another woman present had received ten ballots. A Post Master in an Ohio town reported a thousand ballots sent to folks who could not be found.

Sane, law-abiding American mothers and fathers, with the best interests of their boys and girls at heart are not going to be stampeded by a lot of folks who want gold at any price. Let the "Liquorary Digest" stick to news.

Respectfully,
 Mrs. Maude B. Maxey

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?
 iEdson R. Waite
 Shawnee, Okla.

Good will, we are told, is the ultimate solution of the problems facing those who have been placed in charge of great countries. In short, it offers a way out of all the material problems in which this age or any age is faced.

It is thought that ethical and moral problems will respond to this idealistic treatment.

The great advantage of Christianity considered in comparison to the philosophies of other religions is the fact of good will as a corner-stone.

The fact is that Christianity converted good will from a personal instinct into requirement of human relations.

This good will which we cultivate really furnishes the answer to a perplexed world upon most questions. It gives one, if one has nothing more definite, a workable, moral philosophy.

GOOD WILL IS A MATTER OF WISHING THE OTHER MAN WELL.

Routt with Dr. Oliver went out leaving word for other officers to follow. The capture was unique and rapid. It was quickly seen neither of the autos had been used in the bank robbery but the officers went ahead anyway, armed with high-powered rifles and tear gas bombs.

"Cleve Craft and Ben Simmons were spotted at the lunch room counter by Routt, who stuck his revolver in Craft's back and keeping his prisoner between him and Simmons, managed, with the aid of a boy who was in the lunch room at the time, to get the pair handcuffed. A part of a pint of whiskey, $67 and 5 master keys were found on Craft. He ascended to the rooms overhead, but discovered the other bandit suspects were not there. He called Dr. Oliver to stand guard and went to make a further search.

"In response to the captured pair's pleas that the manacles were too tight and hurting them, Dr. Oliver left to get a key to loosen them. Meanwhile, Kline entered, followed shortly by Routt, who got the drop on him and removed a .38 calibre revolver off him. It contained five regular cartridges and one tear gas cartridge. A half pint of whiskey and five master keys were also taken off him.

ROUTT USED RIFLE

"The other two men, John Craft and John Norman, were spotted by Routt about a square from the lunch room. Waving a young girl pedestrian to the side, the deputy took aim and ordered them to return. Routt, an expert shot, had a 250-3000 Savage rifle in his hand. A tear gas pen, loaded, was taken off Norman, but nothing was found on Craft.

Chief of Police O. A. Maughmer and Bank Detective George Hamm learning of the case, arrived shortly after the capture was effected.

Reported Alive After 7 Years

After having been believed dead for seven years, Colonel P. H. Fawcett, famous English explorer, and his son John, who set out to explore the Brazilian jungles in 1925, are now said to be alive. The Fawcetts made the Brazilian expedition in search of a superior white Indian civilization, which is believed to have survived in the jungle fastnesses. But they were never heard of until recently, when the British Consul at Sao Paulo, Brazil, announced that a jungle trapper had reported to him that he had spoken with a man who said he was Fawcett.

Cleve Craft and Simmons were returned to Chillicothe by Hamm and Dr. Oliver, Chief Maughmer too charge of John Craft, while Routt brought Kline and Norman in.

Cleve Craft, one of the five suspected bandits arrested is wanted for the holdup of William Shank, at Buena Vista, Hocking-co, while the other four are connected with a chicken theft ring, according to Sheriff's Deputies Joe Farbeann and Stanley Spannon of Hocking co, who called at the sheriff's office.

Cleve held up Shank, slugged him in the head and stole $18 from him, last September. He has been sought ever since.

STOLE CHICKENS

The quintet stole a number of chickens from a Mrs. Ellis, at Middle Ford, Hocking-co Thursday. It is said and disposed of them at the Scioto Valley Poultry company for $25. One of the men whose name was not disclosed confessed that they had stolen a lot of chickens in Hocking-co March 11 and sold them to a Columbus poultry house for $80.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S TRAVELS

I am Lord Fairfax, said the gentleman in the center, "and this is my friend Colonel Washington. May we have the honor to know your name?"

"I am Benjamin Franklin."

The Postmaster General of the Colonies had just dismounted from an uneasy horse remarking that he preferred "two certain legs to four uncertain ones." This simple introduction marked the meeting of two men about whom the world was to hear much in the future. The place: Fort Cumberland, Maryland on U. S. Route 1.

ONE of the many historical pick-ups along the road is this boulder, located on U. S. 40 near Braddock Heights, westbound from Frederick, Maryland. Here Lieut. Col. Washington rested his troops on the way to Fort Duquesne in 1775. Silent guns today mark the way of American history in the making. This is an old Braddock gun at Winchester, Virginia.

Dry Law Plank Not Vital, Taber, Candidate Says

COLUMBUS, O., Mar. 21.—Louis J. Taber of Columbus, supposedly the dry candidate for the U. S. Senate, declared today that he will not talk about prohibition in his coming campaign because "other questions are far more important."

Taber's statement conflicts with the opinion of the Anti-Saloon League and the W. C. T. U., which are supporting him for election. Both organizations have insisted that the liquor question is the dominant issue of the campaign.

Taber, who is master of the National Grange and a candidate against Attorney General Bettman for the Republican nomination for the Senate, denied that he is weakening in his stand on prohibition.
